

Ambassador David Pearce Visits Setif

U.S. Ambassador David Pearce visited Setif March 29-30. During his visit, the Ambassador held discussions with senior officials of the wilaya, met with the chairman and members of the chamber of agriculture and with the rector of the University Ferhat Abbas. During his meetings, he discussed prospective cooperation and exchange possibilities in different fields namely education, agriculture and culture.

The Ambassador also toured the ancient roman city of Cuicul (Djemila), its museum and the archeology museum of Setif. He was fascinated with the beauty of the vestiges Sitifis holds and revealed his interest of preserving its archeological sites and restoring their mosaics.

At the end of his two-day visit, Ambassador Pearce led a lively discussion with the EPITA Access School students and handed over success certificates to around twenty of them. He was very satisfied with the English language level students achieved through this language study program. Before leaving the access school, Ambassador Pearce gave a press conference to the local Algerian press representatives and reaffirmed that the last air travel security measures would be reviewed.

As is the custom with new visitors, the Ambassador did not miss to stop by the fountain of Ain El fouara, the city's symbol, and drink from its water to come back.
